Who Needs Technology Escrow

Technology escrow is essential for software users, developers, and the lawyers who represent them. Software users rely on escrow to safeguard business-critical applications in case of vendor disruptions, while developers use it to build trust and protect their intellectual property. For lawyers, escrow agreements provide a reliable legal framework that ensures continuity for clients and mitigates risk for all parties involved.

PRAXIS Technology Escrow, is an independent, third-party escrow provider that protects your technology data and source code. We offer all types of escrow, from software escrow to SaaS escrow to joint venture escrow and everything in between.

What Sets PRAXIS Apart

At PRAXIS Technology Escrow, we are setting the standard in escrow with secure, innovative, and customer-focused solutions. Learn more by following these links:

- Security – Our SOC 2® certification ensures your data is handled with the highest level of confidentiality, integrity, and availability.
- Flexibility – Our flexible, tailored escrow agreements are designed to meet each client's unique needs.
- Automated Escrow solution – Our streamlined process simplifies escrow depositing with a direct and automated connection to source code archives.
- Infinite Retention policy – Our unique service retains all customer escrow deposits for the life of the contract. Deposits are never lost or deleted.
- Verification services – Our quality assurance testing confirms the escrow materials are complete, accurate, and functional.

Why

A technology escrow agreement provides peace of mind for both software users and developers. It acts as a safety net for businesses, ensuring operations can continue even if a software vendor faces bankruptcy or service failure. For software developers, escrow offers a secure, neutral way to store source code and key assets, protecting IP while demonstrating a commitment to their customers' long-term success. By providing a clear action plan, escrow ensures business continuity and strengthens relationships between software users and developers.

“PRAXIS had all the things I was looking for, seamless integration to my development environment, streamlined onboarding processing for new clients, straight forward pricing model, and a responsive customer support mechanism.”

– Hans Otharsson, OpenLegacy

How Might PRAXIS Serve Your Company

PRAXIS works with companies that rely on business-critical software, the developers who create it, and the lawyers representing either side, with clients ranging from startups to Fortune 500 companies. As a trusted software escrow agent, our role is to act as a neutral third party, securely protecting your software source code, data, and documentation until the day you might need the deposit material for continuity of your critical application's continuity and the well-being of your company.
